

Intersecting Identity Profile: Identities are can be either self-ascribed, placed upon individuals by society, or both. In different contexts, certain identities carry more or less privilege than others. Use the Identity column to write in your identities and the other columns to check off which statements apply.

	Identity	You are most aware of	You think least about	You want to build more self-awareness	Has the greatest effect on how others perceive you	You are least comfortable about in public	Give you privilege in society	Most likely to impact your work with clients from “minority” identities
Gender
Sex
Race
Ethnicity
Sexual Identity
Religion and/or Spirituality
Socioeconomic Status
Age/ Cohort Status
(Dis)ability
Nationality/Place of Birth
Tribal/Indigenous Affiliation
Body Size/Type
Sociopolitical Identities (e.g., feminism)
Trauma-Related Identities
Family Religion/Culture
Health/Illness Identities
Education Quality/Attainment
Other Identities Not Listed (your own, or those ascribed to you)

